I. Synopsis: This Act makes a relatively minor change to the language found in section 38-33.3-310 of CCIOA. It now requires that a proxy terminates eleven months after its date unless, the proxy itself indicates an earlier termination date.

II. What this means: The Act clarifies some language that could have been confusing. With the new language, it is more clear that a proxy can terminate before eleven months if the proxy expressly states an earlier expiration date.
